In general, the issue of justice at all times has always been very acute. After all, how it happens in life: someone seeks respect and status with honest labor, and someone - by deception, various kinds of fraud, etc. However, society (most of the people) is always all rows under one comb, equating a decent and employed person to bandits, corrupt officials, etc. People always measure the "total temperature in the hospital." And their "thermometer" is, to a greater extent, the media.

And in fact, if every day it is possible to show several times on the day that an official for bribes is detained in the area, then people will have the impression that all power in the country is one solid mafia. As Adolf Hitler said: "If the masses for a long time to show something, they will soon believe it and take it for due."

In fact, this is not the case, because if it were, our country simply would no longer exist. Always, in any society, in any city or, as in our case, at the university, there are people who become more significant at the university because of their actions, because of their positive actions aimed at developing and maintaining a common well-being in university Walls.

But as it often happens, the impression begins at others that a similar honor and honor a person deserves a dishonest way. Oh, these stereotypes! We argue that any, absolutely any of you, our distinguished readers, could be more significant and respected in your home university, if you were not subordinate to the stereotype "be above other people." Stereotypes pull you on the bottom, the bottom, on which most people live. And it is sad, although the story shows, it is necessary that our civilization exists.

However, we will leave our philosophical reflections aside, regarding the fate of each person on this planet. Go directly, to the very essence of the question, because of which you read this article. Is not it? After all, you want to become more significant in your university? Do you want to solve something, and not be a simple performer? Your goal is a successful career in the future? Then start your hard, but, in turn, an exciting path in adulthood from a student bench.

How to become a more significant person at the university?

Many think that, they say, university, student, all this is somehow small. After all, I want to manage corporations, I want in my submission a large number of people, I want ... Stop! Stop dreaming, at withering time. That all you don't care ... see if you really seek it :) However, do not forget that everything is largely built on the smallest, but, given more precisely, everything large consists of small parts. That's why your task of learning at the university is not only obtaining a certain number of academic knowledge, but also the development of yourself as a person. And what will allow you to develop as individuals? Well, of course, social life.

After all, if you have Napoleonic plans, if you dream with great accomplishments, then you, first of all, should take care of your neighbors, about those who are surrounding you at the moment. Remember once and forever - only helping others, you help yourself. Everything. Point. And, more precisely, an exclamation mark!

I remember about it, start building yourself as a person, my concept in society. At first it will be a society of your higher educational institution, but it is only the beginning ... :)
